their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

THIRTEENTH EPISODE

THE DEVIL WORSHIPERS.

Elaine was scated in the drawing room with Aunt Josephine one afternoon, when her lawyer, Perry Bennett, dropped in unexpectedly.

He had hardly greeted them when the butler, Jennings, in his usual impassive manner announced that Aunt Josephine was wanted on the tele-

No sooner were Elaine and Bennett alone than Elaine, turning to him, ex-

"Last night I dreamed that father came to me and told me that if I would give up Kennedy and put my trust in you, I would find the Clutching Hand. I don't know what to think Bennett, who had been listening intently, moved over nearer to Elaine and bent over her.

"Elaine," he said in a low tone, his remarkable eyes looking straight into her own, "you must know that I love you. Then give me the right to protect you. It was your father's dearest wish I believe, that we should marry. Let me share your dangers and I swear that sooner or later there will be an end to the Clutching Hand. Give me your answer, Elaine," he urged, "and make me the happlest man in all the world."

Elaine listened, and not unsympathetically, as Bennett continued to plead for her answer.

Wait a little while-until tomorrow," she replied finally. "Let it be as you wish, then."

agreed Bennett quietly. He took her hand and kissed it pas-

An instant later Augt Josephine returned. Elaine, unstrung by what had happened, excused herself and went into the library. Involuntarily, her mind traveled back over the rapid succession of events of the past few weeks and the part that she had thought, at least. Kennedy had come to play in her life. Then she thought of their recent misunderstanding. Might there not be some simple explanation of it, after all, which she had missed? What should she do?

I was chatting with Craig in his laboratory, and, at the same time, was watching him in his experimental work. Just as a call came on the telephone, he was pouring some nitro-hydrochloric acid into a test tube to complete a reaction.

The telephone tinkled and he laid down the bottle of acid on his desk, while he moved a few steps to answer the call. Whoever the speaker was, Craig seemed deeply interested, and, not knowing who was talking on the wire, I was eager to learn whether it was anyone connected with the case of the Clutching Hand.

"Yes, this is Mr. Kennedy," I heard Craig say. I moved over toward him and whispered eagerly. "Is there anything new?" A little impatient at being interrupted. Kennedy waved me off. It occurred to me that he might need a pad and pencil to make a note of some information, and I reached over the deak for them. As I did so my arm inadvertently struck the bottle of acid, knocking it over on the top of the desk. Its con-tents streamed out saturating the telephone wires before I could prevent it. In trying to right the bottle my hand came in contact with the acid which burned like liquid fire, and I cried out

"Why-he rang off," she exclaimed angrily to herself, as she hung up the receiver and left the room.

In the center of a devious and windng way, quite unknown to all except those who knew the innermost secrets of the Chinese quarter, and even unknown to the police, there was a dingy tenement house, apparently inhabited by hard-working Chinamen, but in reality the headquarters of the notorious devil wdrshipers, a sect of satanists, banned even in the Celestial em-

The followers of the cult comprised some of the most dangerous Chinese criminals, thugs and assassins, besides a number of dangerous characters who belonged to various Chinese secret societies. At the head of this formidable organization was Long Sin, the high priest of the devil god, and Long Sin had, as we know, already joined forces with the notorious Clutching Hand.

The room in which the uncanny rites of the devil worshipers were conducted was a large apartment decorated in traits of some of the devil deities and costly silken hangings. Beside a large dals depended a huge Chinese gong.

On the dais itself stood, or rather sat, an ugly figure covered with some sort of metallic plating. It almost seemed to be the mummy of a Chinaman covered with gold lenf.

Into this room came Long Sin attired in an elaborate silken robe. advanced and kotowed before the data with its strange figure, and laid down an offering before it.

This performance was witnessed by wenty or thirty Chinamen who knelt in the rear of the room.

At the same time an aged Chinaman carrying a prayer wheel entered the place and, after prostrating himself levoutly, placed the machine on a sort of low stool or tabourette and began turning it slowly, muttering,

A few moments later Long Sin, who had been bowing before the metallic figure in deepest reverence, suddenly sprang to his feet. His glazed eye and excited manner indicated that he had received a message from the lips of Long Sin struck several blows on the resounding gong and then raised his voice in solemn tones.

At the same time, in a room of the adjoining house, the Clutching Hand himself was busily engaged in making the most elaborate preparations some nefarious scheme which his fortile mind had evolved

Finally he nodded in approval and stepped over to the fireplace where ogs were burning brightly in a grate. Pressing a spring in the mantelpiece, the master criminal effected an instant transformation. The logs in the fireace, still burning, disappeared immediately through the bottom of the brick tiling and a motal sheet covered them. An aperture opened at the back, as if had scarcely died away when Clutching Hand stepped out.

"Follow me," he ordered hoarsely, seising Long Sin by the arm and lead-

They passed through the passageway of the fireplace and, having entered the scance room, Clutching Hand began briefly explaining the purpose of the preparations that had been made. Long Sin wagged his head in walcold approved. coluble approval.
